SAIGON, Oct. 30 (UPI).—President Nguyen Van Thieu demoted three top generals and received the resignation of six cabinet ministers, in bowing to public pressure for an end to corruption and incompetence, government sources said today.

Bank Group to Lend Pan Am Huge Sums to Cover Losses

NEW YORK, Oct. 80 (AP-DJ).

Banks have agreed to lend large sums to Pan American World Airways to cover expected operating losses during the next six months. Some sources have estimated that Pan Am needs about $150 million for the winter months to tide it over until the tourist season begins in the spring.

The decision to grant loans to meet payroll and other operating expenses averted for the time being the threat of bankruptcy proceedings for Pan Am. William seawell, Pan Am chairman and president, said earlier this month that negotiations then under way with the banks were crucial to the airline's existence. Because the federal government re-fused last month to subsidize the sirline directly, "there isn't any alternative" to the bank loans.

he said. The agreement was confirmed by bank officials and sources close to Pan Am, although a spokes-man for the airline declined to comment. Details of the loan arrangement, including interest rates, conditions and timing, were expected to be announced soon.

Pan Am has no borrowings outstanding under that agreement, but was effectively restricted in its potential to borrow by a con-dition that would put it in default on any loan if its tangible net (Continued on Page 2, Col. 7)

James Earl Ray yesterday acknowledged being associated with a group of men he believes responsible for assassinating the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King jr. here in 1968, but he denied being the "actual shooter."

In a federal court hearing in which Ray is seeking to overturn his 1869 plea of guilty to the murder, the 46-year-old convict, for the first time, described details of events leading to the shooting on April 4, 1968, as the civil-rights leader stood on the balcony of the Lorraine Motel. When Tennessee Assistant At-torney General Henry Haile pressed for details, Ray's attorneys protested, asking for a private bench conference with U.S. District Court Judge Robert McRae. After a brief buddle, Judge McRae ruled that Ray could continue testifying about details he had discussed with his previous attorneys in preparing his defense but not about matters he had refused to discuss

U.S. Is Cutting World Food-Aid Programs

By H. J. Maidenberg

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (NYT).-When World War II ended, Washington embarked on an unusual and far-reaching program to feed millions of hungry persons overseas, most of whom paid little or nothing for the basic foodstuffs they received.

Now, with even greater num-bers in desperate need of food, Washington is quietly winding down its so-called 'Food for Peace" programs.

One such program has already ended. There were no shipments of powdered milk, upon which millions of children depended, during the fiscal year that ended

Lester Brown, a food expert at the Overseas Development Council observed in Washington recently that, in 1972, about 90 million of the world's poorest people depended on food received from these programs.

20 Million Persons

"An estimated 20 million nutritionally vulnerable people have been cut off from these programs in the past year," he said. In addition, many millions are confronted with costly food bills they cannot afford. Shamsher Singh, chief of the Commodity Division of the World Bank, said the other day: "The poor countries have had their energy bill raised by $10

Court Quashes Case Of Notaire in France

PARIS, Oct. 30 (AP) .- The Paris Appeals Court today directed that murder charges be withdrawn against a provincial notairs and his wife in a case that had stirred passion in France.

After Brigitte Dewevre, 16, was found slain near her home in Brusy-en-Artois April 5, 1972, Pierre Leroy was charged with the killing and held in prison for three months during the investigation. Monique Mayeur, Mr. Leroy's flancée at the time and now his wife, was later charged with complicity and held for 18 days. A year after Brigitte's body was found, a friend, a boy of 16, identified only as Jean-Pierre, admitted the murder. Although he has retracted many of the statements made to the police, he is still charged with the slaying.

equals that unobtainable sum. Obviously, their situation is untenable even in the short term."

It was obvious to the many commodity specialists interviewed in recent weeks that producers of basic foodstuffs are attempting to use their surpluses to pay for vastly increased energy bills. That is a reason, the experts pointed out, that prices of such key foodstuffs as grain, soybeans, and sugar have recently risen almost as much as

Surplus Tonnage

Another reason is that the current tonnages of surplus foods, while they equal those in the years immediately after World War II, must now feed far greater numbers of persons.

The use of food surpluses as an economic weapon began during the cold war, after World War II. During World War II the United States sent huge amounts of food to its allies, regardless of political ideology.

Albania Purges Deputy Premier In Rift on Policy

VIENNA, Oct. 30 (AP) .-Albanian Premier Mehmed Shehu said today that he has dismissed Deputy Premier and Defense Minister Bekir Balluku. Mr. Balluku reportedly lost favor with Enver Hoxha, leader of the ruling Communist party, in a dispute over Albania's attitude toward the Soviet Union.

Albania is China's chief ally in Eastern Europe, Following the Peking line. Mr. Hoxha denounces both the United States and the Soviet Union. But Mr. Baliuku several months ago said in a speech that one of the superpowers is more dan-gerous than the other, implying that Albania should be more Washington than

Meanwhile, the huge handouts of foodstuffs provided a vital support for American agriculture. which had been geared for huge production during the war,

Productive Power

So great was the productive power of the U.S. farmers that, by the end of the Korean War 1953, the United States faced large surplus of food each year. So did Argentina, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and other countries that had increased production to help feed the world during World War II.

To cope with domestic crop surpluses and increasing foreign competition, Washington strengthened its tariff barriers on imported food and, in 195 swept many relief programs into the Agricultural Trade Develop-ment and Assistance Act (Public Law 480), known as the "Food for Peace" program.

Under Title I of the program, foodstuffs were shipped to America'e political allies under extremely attractive terms. The recipient country usually paid in local currency or over a period of up to 40 years at very low interest rates.

Washington sid officials point out that the large sums amassed their food loans were often used in the recipient countries for improving health, communications, and educational systems, all of which also eventually helped to increase the demand for food.

Given Away

American surplus food was also given away under Title II of Public Law 480, and accounted for roughly half the $1 billion to $1.5 billion a year involved in the overall plan.

The bulk of U.S. surpluses were erased by Moscow's purchase of 19 million metric tons of grain and soybeans here and 11 million tons elsewhere in 1972 because of a poor Soviet crop.

lation," he said.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30 (WP). to prevent one of Mr. Nixon's "Shock" is one of the most feared words in medicine.

It means that the flow of blood throughout the body suddenly threatens to become inadequate to maintain life. It is the event that suddenly happened to former president Richard Nixon yesterday afternoon.

What caused it? Surgeons here, reading Dr. John

Lungren's brief bulletin and description of the operation, sketched this probable sequence: Mr. Nixon had been getting sizable doses of the powerful antiblood-clotting drug heparin, to combat his dangerous thrombophlebitis—a vein inflammation.

When it became necessary to operate on him because new clots were still forming and might reach his lungs or heart, Mr. Nixon's surgeons apparently could not wait the usual 48 hours before any surgery. That would have provided enough time for the heaviest doses of heparin to wear off, to avoid the risk of the patient's bleeding to death as a result of the surgery.

A patient in shock is pale, mentally confused and sweating, although his skin feels cold and clammy to the touch. And doctors monitoring the vital signs find blood pressure below normal, a rapid pulse, and the kidneys releasing less urine than they should.

At the same time, the heart which the body depends on to pump nourishing blood to the tisres-loses its efficiency. Its job is further complicated by the fact that, when shock occurs, some veins and arteries and their smaller branches capillaries and arterioles are oversupplied with blood while others do not get

In the process the delicate balance of forces that ordinarily instantaneously changing physiological needs is thrown out of kilter.

Retroperitoneal Bleeding The cause of the serious complications," Dr. Langren said, "was in all probability due to some retroperttoneal bleeding secondary to anti-coagulatitherapy.

In short, Mr. Nixon was bleeding from the rear (or "retro" section) of the abdominal cavity behind the blood vessels and intestines, in the space between the intestines and the abdominal wall (or peritoneum).

The bleeding, said Dr. Karel Absolon, chief of surgery at the Washington Hospital Center. probably came from the small blood vessels dissected to reach the major vessel on which Mr Nixon's surgeons operated. Such vessels are always either tied i'I or cauterized or otherwise closed to prevent bleeding.

But with the presence of heparin, "they probably coxed and coxed until the bleeding was just too much," Dr. Absolon

. The surgeons also wanted to maintain sume heparinization

Because William Lawson's is not just a single whisky, but a blend - born of the union of many different grain and malt whiskies.

Smoke is dirty - but at least it's obvious and fairly local. The more dangerous air pollutants are invisible and sometimes you cannot smell them either. Being gases, like the air itself, they travel with it over great distances. Country air may be laden with them. Before you can deal with them you have to know what they are and where they come from . And that, because of their wide dispersion, means monitoring their concentrations over hundreds of square miles. We have set up, for the Netherlands Government, such a monitoring network covering the whole of Holland. Such a network is not merely a large number of monitors dotted all over the country. What the Netherlands Government was looking for, and what it found in Philips, was an industrial partner capable of planning for doing this entirely automaticallya total system and supplying the hardware to implement it. In this network more than 200 monitoring stations measure the air pollution once a minute (and some make meteorological measurements as well). That's a lot of data. It has to be transmitted, recorded and reduced to a more digestible form without any of it being lost. The means including error detection and the calibration of every monitor and the on-line and off-line data processing required for determining patterns and trends - was our major task.

1 Air pollution measurement. This is e typical monitoring station. Beside SO2 it can measure the concentrations of CO, NO., NO, Os, H2S and dust continuously. Alarm levels for any pollutant can be set and the station calibrated by Automatic monitoring. Accurate control of the effluent from a works - for example, to ensure that it is always within legal limits – requires accurate and fully automatic monitoring. The monitor shown here can run unattended for a month transmitting data on turbidity, acidity, dissolved oxygen and so forth to a central station.

4 Autometic purification plants. Restrictions on the discharga of industrial effluents into rivers, canals or sewers will become increasingly severe – and purification before discharga correspondingly important.

Moreover, pollutants are often valuable materials going to waste – as indeed is tha water that carries them.

Philips heve devised automatic purification plants capable of recovering a large number of pollutants and rendering the water fit for recirculation. This plant built for an Italian company is one of tham.

Mr. Rockefeller's Finances

As the details of Nelson Rockefeller's finances continue to pour out, it becomes increasingly important to keep in mind what this exercise in high finance and the tax laws is all aboot, Mr. Rockefeller is not disclosing his financial transactions simply to let the rest of us admire their size and scope. Nor is he spreading out this information in order to satisfy the spreading curiosity about how a rich man gets and spends his money. He has opened his private financial records because he wants to persuade Congress and the public that he is honest, truthful and ethical and because he believes that neither the size of his fortune nor the way he has used it should be an impediment to his confirmation as vice-president.

We bring this up because it seems to us that the relevance of Mr. Rockefeller'e disclosures to the issue before Congress is being obscured by fascination with the details of those disclosures and confusion about the meaning of some of them. Take, for example, the fact that Mr. Rockefeller has agreed to pay $903,712 in back taxes to the federal government. That is interesting and somewhat mind-boggling but, without more, it is not relevant to whether or not Mr. Rockefeller should be confirmed as vice-president. What the Internal Revenue Service audit of Mr. Rockefeller's tax returns for the last five years has laid bare is not fraud but disagreements between the IRS and Mr. Rockefeller (or his tax lawyers) about the deductibility of certain expenditures and the handling of certain assets. Those disagreements are commonplace between the IRS and big taxpayers, he they individual or corporate, and they often are settled in court, simply because they involve questions about certain parts of the tax laws that have never been raised before. There is no suggestion that Mr. Rockefeller failed to report income that he actually received (as one recent vice-president did) or that he created phony deductions. So far as we know, no one has even intimated that there is anything dishonest about the tax returns he signed.

Similarly, the fact that Mr. Rockefeller deducted as a gift to the State of New York the $348.176 he spent improving the executive mansion in Albany is interesting but, without more, irrelevant to the question pending before Congress. There is no suggestion that he permitted public money to be spent to increase the value of his personal property (as one recent president did). Instead, he spent his money to increase the. value of publicly owned property and then took a tax deduction for it. The economic impact of what he did was to transfer money from his bank account to real estate owned by the people of New York, Part (but not all) of this money would otherwise have gone to the federal Treasury. Unless there was some underhanded dealing with contractors or others—and no one has suggested such a thing—there is nothing illegal or corrupt about what he did.

It is, of course, the size of Mr. Rockefeller's fortune that has made his tax returns so fascinating. It is not often that the American people have a chance to examine the affairs of a man who is now paying in back taxes more money than the average citzen earns in a lifetime. So it may be useful to put the back tax figure in perspective. The IRS assessment against Mr. Rockefeller, covering five years, represents the same proportion of his income that an assessment of $10,000. covering five years, would represent in relation to the income of an average con-

In the long run, it may be that the size of Mr. Rockefeller's fortune will be the stumbling block on his road to the vicepresidency. As we have suggested before, Congress needs to make sure Mr. Rockefeller fully understands how money can be misused without its being put to illegal or immoral purposes. This, it seems to us is the real question raised by the gifts Mr. Rockefelier has made to people who are or who have been in public office. It should provide the principal focus for the two congressional committees once they get back to town and turn to what should be their first item of business. Mr. Rockefeller's income tax returns, in other words, ought to be of only passing interest unless there are some major aspects of them that have not yet been revealed. There is nothing that has yet appeared concerning those returns that raises questions about his fitness for high public

Continuity in Bonn

At a time of considerable instability in the democratic countries of Europe, even state and local elections take on heightened interest. There was unusual curiosity in European Community and NATO capitals about the effect of last weekend's state elections in Bavaria and Hesse on Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's five-month-old West German

Schmidt's Social Democrats lost ground in both states, giving no their leading position in Hesse to the Christian Democratic Union for the first time since creation of the Federal Republic, His Free Democratic partner was also set back in Hesse and made no gain in Bavaria. The big winner was Franz-Josef Strauss, whose Christian Social Union in Bavaria polled a record 62 per

If these results affect national policies at all, changes are unlikely before the federal elections of 1976. In response to Strauss's assertion that the Social Democrats lost votes because of Bonn's policy of détente with the Soviet bloc. Schmidt blithely flew off to Moscow on schedule with Foreign Minister

Hans-Dietrich Genscher for talks with Soviet leaders about economic relations and the problems of West Berlin. Nor will the election reverses curtail the role of strong leadership Schmidt has exerted in the Common Market and especially his drive for an overhaul of the disjointed common agricultural policy. His long-run prospects have not been damaged irreparably by two state elections.

Although West Germany has a parliamentary system, the candidates for chancello count for a great deal in federal elections. The Christian Union parties are still in turmoll about the choice of a candidate to oppose Schmidt in 1976. His decisive victory in Bavaria will give Strauss more influence in the selection process, though he almost certainly cannot get the nomination for himself; and his role as kingmaker is more likely to be divisive than unifying.

It is far too early to count out Schmidt: and continuity is certain in any conceivable circumstances to characterize most of West Germany'e policies toward the European Community, NATO, and East-West détente.

There were no real surprises in the Queen's Speech. Normally, when a government presents its immediate program after an election victory, there is some interest in the detail of how it will immediately interpret its manifesto in terms of parliamentary action. On this occasion, however, the government has been producing the policies to which it now gives priority since February, in the form of white papers and consultative documents.

It is without question a left-wing course on which Mr. Wilson intends to lead the country. What is more, despite his slim overall majority on paper, the Prime Minister probably has the votes to introduce most of what was promised. For on most of the individual items, some elements of the non-Conservative opposition are likely to vote with Labor.

Some of the items for nationalization in the already announced Labor program, notably the proposal to take ports, road haulage and the construction industry into public ownership, did not feature in the submitted list. It still seems, however, that these industries are part of Labor plans for a later stage of this Parliament. They are, therefore, left in the unsatisfactory position of having a great cloud of doubt over their futures. It is not a satisfactory position. -From the Times (London).

Mideast Setback

King Hussein'e defeat by the Palestinian Liberation Organization at the Arab summit meeting in Rabat is a huge impediment to progress toward peace at a time when nerves were already becoming dangerously frayed. In place of King Hussein, who was already deeply involved in factual negotiations with Israel for a modus vivendi including restoration of part of the West Bank, authority is now transferred to Yassir Arafat, a guerrilla and terrorist leader committed to Israel's destruction and to no negotlations with the Jewish state.

Israel likewise rejects negotiations with Arafat. If Yasair Arafat, now recognized by the UN, can respond to his enhanced prestige by giving evidence of serious responsibility, Israel might become less adamant against him. No one-including Russia and its new favorite. Syria, whom it has armed to the teeth, should have any illusions about the wider dangers of a new war in which both sides would use long-range missiles.

WASHINGTON.—The hobgoblin of this year's elections is that the Democrats want a massive victory in the House and Senate races so that they can dominate President Ford and override his vetoes, but this is Halloween talk ther than practical politics. Even if Democrats added another 35 seats to their present House majority of 248-187, they would still fall short of the 291 rotes needed to create the vetoproof Congress Ford is campaignthe against And this assumes that every Democrat in the House would vote the party line, which didn't happen even in the days of Franklin Roosevelt's lopsided

It is true that the Democrats are a greedy bunch and would take a landslide victory if they could get it, but even House Speaker Carl Albert of Oklahoma doesn't want to unbalance the system and knows from experience that the larger the Democratic majority the harder it is for him to control their votes.

Veto Issue

The Constitution insisted on a two-thirds vote of both the House and the Senate to override a presidential veto precisely because the Founding Fathers intended to make such votes extremely difficult, and in general the Congress has been faithful to this principle, regardless of the party balance:

Even in 1973, when President. Nixon's popularity was falling fast, the Congress was able to override only one of his nine 73 vetoes Climiting his war-making powers); and of the 37 vetoes he cast from early, 1969 mill the end of 1973, only five were over-

In practical political terms, the Democrats are less interested in boosting their present majorities in the House and Senate than they are in getting control of the machinery and patronage of the governorships in the states with the most electoral votes. They are not as eager for House and of the state houses that will help them in the presidential play-

Their main objective is not to override Ford's vetoes but to ride the Republicans out of the White House, which the GOP has oc-cupled for the last two terms. A spectacular Democratic victory in the House and Senate next week, followed by defiance of presidential vetoes in the next two years, could easily produce a reaction in 1976.

The Economy

The economy is still likely to be the major issue in the next presidential election. It is the issue that has kept the Democrate in the presidency for 28 out of the last 44 years, but it is not likely to help them if they exipple Ford by overriding one veto after

Besides, if the Democrats win by an extravagant margin, their leaders in the House would have to consider another disadvantage: The possibility that a lot of new young Democratic upstarts might challenge the present leadership and join with those who would prefer a different speaker.

Accordingly, talk of a one-party system is both bad politics an bad history. The trend usually goes against the president's party midyear elections, but in the last six midvear elections, the average House gain of the "out" party has been only 26 seats, and even much larger gains have not always assured victory for the onts at the next presidential elec-

For almost 30 years now, the essential fogredient for global status as a "power" has been the muclear bomb. With it, a country has been in the club; without it, governments have had to rely on an ally to grant guest privileges or at least to spread a protective umbrella to compensate for lesser status. A whole generation of geopolitical thinkers was educated on the map weighted for the nuclear powers. Geopolitics has been the 20th century's dismal science, as economics was for the 19th. It gauged its development by a minute hand hovering toward the midnight of nuclear holocaust. The balance of power

The new map of geopolitics has some other startling changes. Firmly established as hig powers are Nigeria and Indonesia, Norway may be coming along soon; Interesting discoveries have been made off Maleysia and Taiwan, giving hope to the latter just as it was being effectively drummed Morocco, which has already gained some status from its newly prospering phosphate busines just granted two offshore oil Pakistanis are longingly studying geological surveys suggesting that they may be sitting on some 40 billion barrels of oil. The government recently increased its exploration budget by 43 per cent, savoring the irony that Pakistan could become a major power under the new rules just after India managed to squeak into the club under the old.

The power game played under the oil rules rather than the nuclear rules doesn't change all the calculations of geopolitics.
The United States and the Soviet Union remain superpowers. China is probably close to superpower status. Britain stays in her same ranking, as long as Westminster can prevent Scotland from learning too much about declarations independence. France would be the big loser if Gen. de Gaulle's little force de frappe could no longer suffice to assure big-power

Goals Reversed

The new geopolitics reverses some of the goals that dominated the old. Instead of nonproliferation, what the world needs is more proliferation—of oil reserves. Underground testing should be banned when dealing with nucle devices, but promoted in terms of oil exploration and drilling impose limitations on new sophis-Mosted espabilities for nuclear weapons, but they will be promoting new sophisticated capabilities for producing energy. The passing from a nuclear age into an oil age in geopolitics if it really happens that way will naturally not eliminate the con-stants of history, the tensions and national rivairies, the threats and reslities of war. There will be new temptations to use muclear espons, but even short of that the financial and social upher alone are creating new geopolitical But the evolution can be called benign in this sense: Aspiring to big-power status used to demand diversion of national resources into the production of hombs that contaminate the physical environment even more dangerously than the political; in the interests of mankind they can never be used. The new geopolitics grants the privileges of power to nations that direct their national efforts into the modoction of energy, a product that can be used, that can help people to live, and just possibly to live better.

The collectivization of agricul-ture, carried out under Stalin's

In the early years, thousands of Lithuanians took to the woods years, the controversy has cooled, but resistance smolders. Such writers as Jonas Maciu in Literatura Ir Menas, of Vilna have been criticized in the party

New Canadian Novels Raise Specter of U.S. Domination

By William Borders

MONTREAL Oct. 30 (NYT) .—
"The Americans look on our resources as being their own," the commanding general of Canada's armed forces tells his men just before a crucial battle in "Exconeration," a popular new Canadian novel, "They look on us as being weak-kneed, gray-faced people, and they see our country as a colony of the Str'..."

The rate of repeat abortions in the United States is unknown medical authorities believe it is traception backed up by repending respirate with mixed Dr. Million Danon, administrate respirate.

"Repeated abortion is a matter of empern," says Dr. Jean Pakter, director of the New York City Health Department's Bureau of Materialy Services and Francis Planning We'd like to see more women turn to contraceptive after their first abortion, rather than accidentally become pregpans all over again. We hope to remov and concentrate our efforts for family planning after we do further research into the characteristics of abortion repeaters so we can pinpoint our information directly to them.

While we are concerned about abortion repeaters, we are not at the point where we are going to 'After two abortions, that's

Another View

Another, less stringent view comes from Dr. Christopher Tletze, senior consultant with the Population Council and director of its abortion research activities, who says, "The number of women having repeat abortions is small compared to the entire population of women. The small percentage of abortion repeaters corresponds fairly well to the high level of contraceptive effectiveness." After a recent analysis relating to the likelihood of repeat abortion, Dr. Tietze believes that the percentage of repeat abortions to be expected among young women on the pill in the year following their first legal abortion is be-tween 18 and 53 per cent. (The pill is 98 to 99 per cent effective.) For those using less effective con-traceptive methods, 9 to 24 per cent will return for a second abortion in the year after the first one, he estimates.

In the publication Family Planning Perspectives, Dr. Tietze predicts an ever-increasing num-ber of repeat abortions, "Within 10 years," he writes, "approximating the remaining portion of their childbearing period, 27 to 50 per cent of pill users and a substantial majority of users of other methods may be expected to experience at least one repeat

NEW YORK (NYT).-American men, many of them belered and confused about their role in society today, are seeking help from family and marriage counselors in greater numbers than at any time in the

The development is part of the increasing acceptance of both marriage and family counseling as aids in solving problems. Although family services no longer have such long waiting lists as they had in the past, spokesmen point out that "resources have increased tramendously in the last decade."

"People today are looking at their problems in a different way," said Judith Lieb, executive director of the Nathan W. Ankerman Family Institute, which specializes in family psychotherapy. "They are more aware of the kind of help, and the level of help available, and that they don't have to suffer with prob-

Although marriage counseling usually deals with one or both marriage partners, family counsaling and therapy encompasses not only the husband and wife but children and, very often, relatives and friends close to the family. completely bewildered by all the new demands being made on them, said Dr. Salvatore Ambrowno, director of The Family Service Association serving Nassau County in New York

"Women are getting a whole new picture of themselves," he said. Through feminism and maybe even consciousness-raising sessions, they are getting the idea that they are allowing themselves to be willing victims, and they are protesting. "Women used to put up with a lot as long as the man was a good provider, but no more, and this applies to even workingclass women," he added, "And we rarely used to hear complaints about women not being sexually satisfied ... now we do."

Although confusion about role identity was rarely given as the "precipitating" problem when a couple or family sought help, many counseloss observe that, after initial discussions, chang-ing mores were clearly bothering a number of men and, in many cases women as well.

Standby Problems . "The standby problems are communication, relationships with children and relatives, money and sex," said Dr. Itdam's Murillo-Rohde. "The presenting problem may be. We are fight-ing or, 'We can't get along,' or We don't communicate, but there is no question that women are demanding more."

HOUSE

"A lot of men are coming in Marriage and Family Counselors, Rabbi Berger noted that said that more women were refusing to accept a differentiation in men's and women's roles. "You can't change the role of women without changing the role of men," said Sanford Sherman, the executive director of Jewish Family Services. The agency, the largest of its kind in the United States, and a division of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, handles about 10.000

. Although women are demanding that "husbands pull their oar, more in the family," men are resisting "because they feel too much is being dumped on them," Mr. Sherman said.

Another problem, he observed, was the increasing incidence of what some husbands perceive as "overaggressive" women. "The men feel devastated," he noted. "Nothing they do is right and they are being out down at every

Mr. Sherman, one of many who commented on the number of families, rather than individuals, coming in for consultation, thought that the surge to egalitarianism" had also confused many women.

Other Opinions

Similar impressions were volc-ed by Dr. Murillo-Rohde, and Rabbi Philmore Berger, the rabbinic director of the Counseling Center of the New York Fed-eration of Reform Synagogues.

"The women'e movement has successfully raised the consciousness of women but I think that some of these women don't really want to get out of the home," Dr. Murillo-Rohde said, "Some are frightened by everything that is going on ... there's an ambivalence, a dilemma going on within them." -

Many women would like to stay home and take care of the family but they feel guilty if they don't work," said Dr. Arthur Green an assistant clinical professor of psychiatry at the Downstate Medical Center, New York,

> Many of the women involved in the 2,500 cases handled annually by the archdiocese have not attended consciousness-raising sessions nor are they active feminists, he said. "But they have absorbed it through osmosis," Father Rein-heimer stated, "It used to be when a couple came in that the woman would say to her hus-band, 'you talk' Now, in many cases, before he gets a chance to open his mouth, she takes over." Although Dr. Green, who is also a psychoanalyst in private prac-tice, observed that the women's movement; has caused "quite a bit of family confusion," he said he did not believe that it caused

"The woman who goes out to a consciousness-raising session one or two or three times a week and gets her husband ngry -it's something that would have occurred anyway—she would have gone out to play bridge or amething. The movement doesn't cause the primary problems" Several counselors noted that sithough role confusion would undoubtedly continue, a partial solution might unwittingly he brought about by the current economic situation. Men might find that it was somewhat of a relief to share their burden.

"Sometimes it works out very well." Dr. Murilio-Rohde added. "The woman helps by bringing in money and finding herself, and the husband discovers that he appreciates the help. Inflation is doing something that other things

U.S. Auto Makers Cut Output Plans U.S. auto makers, reacting quickly to the re-newed shump in new-car sales, have cut their planned new-car production in domestic assembly plants next month to levels about 19 per cent below a year earlier. The reduced November production schedules also have pushed fourth-quarter output estimates about 10 per cent below the year-earlier production, instead of a 6-percent drop previously forecast. Sources warned that further production cutpacks—possibly big ones—are likely to drive final quarter output even lower later this year, as auto makers review their deteriorating sales and soaring inventory position on a daily basis.

WASHINGTON, Oct., 30 (AP-DJ).—The U.S. Export-Import Bank has, without any formal announcement, canceled loans and financial guarantees it ap-proved last January to help finance construction of a $345-mulion crude of pipeline project in Egypt, The bank confirmed yesterday that loans and guarantees of "up to $100 million" for the project, announced last Jan. 10, had been

The action was expected, par-ticularly after the Arab countries sponsoring the project decided earlier this year to award the major contracts for construction of the two 200-mile-long, 42-inch crude oil lines, linking the Gulf of Suez with the Mediterranean sea, to Italian engineering and construction companies.

Bank officials previously believed that the major contract awards for the Suez-Mediterranean oil lines would go to Becktel Corp. and other U.S. sup-

When the bank authorized the credits last January the borrower was identified as the Suez-Mediterranean Petroleum Pipeline Corp., of Catro.

In any event, U.S. sources noted that the Export-Import Bank is authorized by Congress to lend to borrowers abroad only for the purchase of equipment and ser-vices from U.S. suppliers.

Analysts said there was little in the news to account for the strong two-session gain. They noted that further signs appeared of a slowing U.S. economy.

However, stock market analyst Charles Jensen of Merkin & Co. sald the market's shrugging off of negative economic news starting early yesterday continued to encourage traders.

Like some other analysts, he said the gain might have been encouraged to some extent by news indicating that no serious coal strike lies ahead and by coal tinued declines in interest rates. He also noted that the industrial average began to pull back at one point late in the session as it approached the 680 area. where it has turned back several

the NASDAQ industrial average Productivity

Drops in U.S. WASHINGTON, Oct. 30 (AP). -Productivity dropped sharply in the third quarter while labor costs continued to soar, further adding to inflationary pressures, the gov-ernment reported today. The Labor Department said productivity in the July-September period declined at a 3-per-cent seasonally-adjusted annual rate, reflecting a 3.3-per-cent drop in output and a three-tenths of 1-per-cent decline in man-hours. Productivity—that is, output per man-hour-has now dropped in five of the last seven quarters. It fell 7.1 per cent in the first quarter of the year and edged up six-tenths of a per cent in the second quarter. The government said the thirdquarter decline in output reflected a larger decline than in manhours, resulting from a shorteo-ing of the average workweek, which was down 1.1 per cent.

Compensation per man-hour, which reflects wage costs as well as employer contributions to social security and other fringe benefits, rose 10.5 per ceot during the third quarter. This compared with a rise of 14.2 per cent in the previous quarter.

The government said the increased compensation, combined with the drop in output per manbour, resulted in a 13.9-per-cent jump in unit labor costs. Rising labor costs put pressure on employers to raise prices to keep profits high, thus fueling inflatioo.

Despite the increase in compensation, real compensation per man-hour—that is, pay per man-hour adjusted for inflation decreased 23 per cent in the

ASK HIM WHY HE FORESEES POSSIBLE GOLD PANIC

old was near 5180 earlier in 1974. The Dines Latter predicted on Nettonal 19 like 19 perhaps 3307 by Christmas. If hill 5127 on July 3, 1974, rose to around $150, and has negative leveled off. It would take a buying panic to hit $300 by Christmas for the other ball of his prediction to work out. What could cause such a buying wave?

The key point is that with Americans able to own sold legally for the first time in four generalisms. WHO WILL BE THE SELLERS? It it is to be the U.S. Treasury, they have so much gold they can temporarily suppress like price down to any level they wish. But it, as seems more likely, the open market will been the brunt of this new demend, a panic court develop because there simply isn't that much gold available at these prices. On October 24, 1974, the price of gold exploded above the Stoll level for the first time in months for a clear Upsido Breekout, Perhaps lasters learned on that day that the Tressury had decided not to sall its gold. The future will reveal the facts.
Mr. Dines firmly believes that gold is going to achieve historic heights. The following is his viewpoint: South Africa produces about 7% of the free word's gold and al least 30% of her entire new gold production will go into Kruger Ronds. Furthermore, jewelers and denlists have been living off their $35 gold inventories, unwisely expecting the gold price in drop. If is very utilely that above $200 they could penic and try to replenish their inventories at any price. Furthermore, lower interest rates, as described in Mr. Dines's first book, as a builtish factor for golds, because low rates make it easier for speculators to hold positions; also, in Mr. Dines's opinion, gold has been, is, and will be, "the only game in fown." Moss always flock to winners. Furthermore, the large institutions now gearing up to sell gold to the public need to start inventories from the sero level and membrane money will switch to gold. All this hearding is likely to have a great impact, especialty since the Italian-German loan has fixed a new gold floor between $150, tast below rocent levels. Therefore $41, Dines's to state downside risk is minimal for speculators. Another factor will be stoor overly as beadiers of perspiration devolop on short sellers' foreigneds.
Finally, the U.S. historically has had an emotional attachment to gold, from the gold rush of 189 to Humphrey Bogari in "The Treasure of Stern Madre." Gold, the royal matal, is a very special matal to humanily.
If you like this blust and tranchant enalysis, come to Mr Dines's amount sold seminar on Monday, November 4, at the Loodon Mittoe, commencing 19 p.m. a sharp and ending 5 p.m. Registration is 3120 U.S. or 50 Pounds (any leading currency accepted) and includes a goormet backson and cocktell purby after the seminar. Per payable at seminar.) Bring a guest and deduct 10% from both your fees. If you can't make it, send this ad with 518 to Dord. HTSD for the next 4 issues of The Dines Letter, and find out which gods and silvers Dines likes now and what he sees ahead for the stock market. THE ACCURACY OF PREVIOUS ADVICE IN THE OINES LETTER DOES NOT ASSURE THE CORRECTNESS OR PROPIT. ABILITY OF FURTHER RECOMMENDATIONS.

A banker can be more useful than a bank.

However well organized, a bank never has the intuition, accessability or dynamism of the individual banker. A bank has no imagination. At Bankers Trust Paris, we are a small team of bankers, trained in international markets, on the look out for the services our bank can offer you. In France or any other part of the world.

We are bankers capable of sharing your enthusiasm for your projects, of suggesting formulas best adapted to your development in France or abroad: we can provide such services as local or euro financing, buyers' or sellers' credits, foreign exchange, discovery of far away markets.

Bankers capable also of stopping you in time, if advisable, before putting in motion the banking institution without which, it must be admitted, there would be neither business nor bankers.

Bankers Trust, 2 Avenue Montaigne, welcomes you to the wide world of Bankers Trust. Claude E. de Messières - General Manager - Tél. 256.62.62

An Autobiography

By Angela Yvonne Davis. A Bernard Geis Associates Book. Random House. 400 pp. $8.95.

tobiography of the black militant who is probably best known for her fights with the California Board of Regents over whether or not she could teach philosophy at the University of California San Diego (she couldn't), and with the people of California over whether or not she was involved in the famous Marin County courthouse shootout (she wasn't)

The book is a straightforward account that begins with the events leading up to Miss Davis's arrest in October, 1970, then cuts back to her childhood in Birmingham, Als., and the proceeds chronologically through the 28 years of her life to the climax of the trial that eventually led to her acquittal. And as such, it supplies any number of clarifying details about Miss Davis's upbringing and education (she at-tended Elizabeth Irwin High School in New York through an American Friends Service Committee program; Brandels Univer-sity on a scholarship; the Sorbonne on the Hamilton College junior-year-in-France program; and Frankfurt University in Germany on the advice of Herbert Marcuse); about her involvement in the black liberation movement and the Communist party; and about her much-publicized arrest, incarceration and trial What's more, unlike her theoretical writings some of which appeared in a collection Miss Davis helped to edit called "If They Come in the Morning the autobiography seems to be direct, simple and relatively personal in style. So presumably we are afforded a glimpse at the author's character, And though Miss Davis says in her preface that she is loath to "individualize" herself-is reluctant to distinguish herself from "the millions of my people" whose lives "the very same forces . . . have shaped and misshaped"—it is hard to resistfeeling curious about her as an individual. For she appears so unusually intelligent, articulate, and well-grounded in her beliefs that one almost instinctively looks to her for explanations one wouldn't expect from others of the same militancy and political persuasion.

As it turns out on closer reading, bowever, her character isn't specially conducive to the auto biographical mode. She is successful in not "individualizing" herself. Whatever she does and wherever she goes, she feels drawn "Janus-like" between herself and the general plight of her people. So she never permits herself a moment of spontaneity, never admits to an instance of personal conflict or indecision. never tells us a thing that hasn't been prefabricated to contribute to her ultimate political devel-

Indeed she doesn't even tell us very much about what did contribute to her political develop-

AT first glance there seem to ment: She merely notes the most be several good reasons for obvious passages in explaining reading "Angela Davis," the auobvious passages in explaining why a high-school reading of The Communist Manifesto hit me like a bolt of lightning" (of her subsequent years of studying philosophy, we learn nothing of substance. The only friends she mentions from her high-school years are those who became her "comrades in arms" in "a Marxist-Leninist youth organiza-tion with fraternal ties with the party.

More annoying are her off-thecuff political judgments. The fact that while visiting Berlin in 1963 she never had any trouble getting through Checkpoint Charlie, she concludes to be the German Democratic Republic's "way of showing their solidarity with black people." The idea that Cuba's Committee to Defend the Revolution is a spy organization she finds "obviously absurd, since the majority of the Cuban population belonged" to the group.

Finally and this may well spring from the bias of a white person who has never suffered from bigotry in the American judicial system—one finds it difficult to accept Miss Davis's conclusion that she was a "political prisoner whom millions of people from throughout the world rescued from persecution and death," Doubtless she was a political prisoner, but in fact, according to her own accomt, it was finally the men and women of the jury conforming to specific rules of justice, who found her not guilty as charged. Of course, one understands that according to Miss Davis's ideology these people were merely automata twitching in response to large material forces, Still, her accounting makes it look as though they twitched according to their consciences, And judging from the way she addressed her defense to these men and women. Miss Davis knew all along that they would.

A 10-1-1-1 hand distribution, theoretically, should occur four times in a million deals, or once in 625 years. East got one of these rare birds and not surprisingly showed a lack of experience in dealing with it.

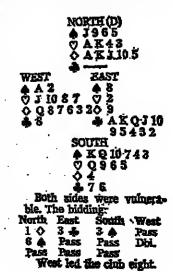

There are no rules that offer guidance in hidding a 10-card suit when the opponents have opened the hidding. There are two objectives: to become declarer at almost any - -; and to create problems for the opposition in finding their best contract.

The odds were slightly against East being able to take a trick in defense, even if he was on lead. In attack he could expect to take 10 tricks, plus the number of aces his partner happened to hold. A jump to five clubs over one spade was unlikely to buy the contract, so a jump all the way to the six-level came into serious consideration. At the other extreme was a cunning pass with the intention of bidding later. East's actual choice was a jump to three clubs, which had little to recommend the South scraped up a bid of three spades, locating the 10-card fit for the partnership. That was all the encouragement North needed to bid a slam. and he raised immediately to six

This put East's judgment to the test, and he failed. North's direct slam bid, without using Blackwood, made it highly likely that he was void in clubs. In his three title bouts, Foreman had needed only 11 minutes 35 seconds in dethroning Frazier and successfully defending his crown against Joe (King) Roman and Norton, but in the ring under a canopy in the Zaire capital's soccer stadium, he was unable to pound All into submission with the same punches that had de-

At the opening bell, Foreman moved clumsily but quickly. He appeared to slow All with a long left hook to the body near the end of the first round. He also planted All to the ropes and slammed by the ropes with both hands to the ropes. hands to the rib cage. All covered up effectively. When the round ended, All sat on his stool and winked across the ring.

When the round started, Foreman again chased Alt, pinning him against the ropes. But suddenly All retaliated with a flurry of jabs. Midway in this round, Ali appeared to wobble and he grabbed Foreman's shoulder momentarily. But quickly he swung a right cross and several jabs. During the third, Ali was content to lay on the top rope and permit Foreman to pummel him almost at will. But every so often, the old bee would sting the young lion with jabs that snapped back Foreman's head.

Early Fatigue

In the fourth, Ali opened with a quick flurry of jabs that jarred Foreman's head. But still Ali was content to lay on the ropes again. Foreman's legs appeared weary as he walked after Ali and often lunged ineffectively.

When the fifth began, Ali maintained his strange tactics. Other boxers had been toppled quickly by Foreman's sledge-hammer punches but Ali obviously had prepared himself well for this task. There was no obvious sign of the punishment. During the intermission before Dundee hurried across the ring apron to where a Zairois boxing official was trying to tighten the turnbuckle to control the top rope that Ali had been leying against, But instead of tightening it, the Zairois official was loosening it.

All avoided those ropes during the sixth. And in avoiding the ropes, he moved more than he had done before in jabbing Fore-man effectively and often.

The rope sagged.

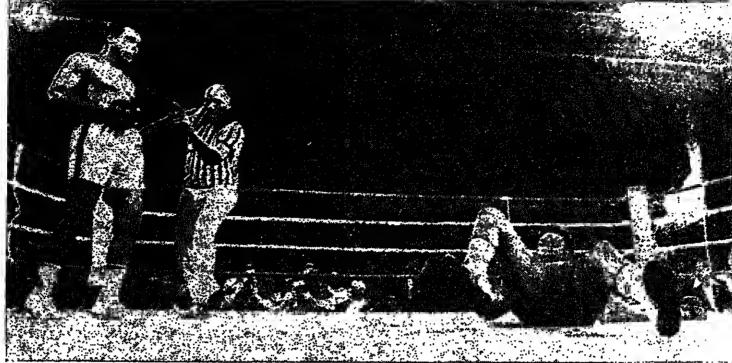

Stambling along, Foreman chased Ali throughout the seventh, but his face began to swell, espe-cially around the right eye that had been cut in training causing a six-week postponement. Foreman was hoping to measure Ali in the eighth for the big punch that had finished 24 consecutive opponents but his arms were powerless.

combination, Ali produced the knockout as Foreman barely missed beating the count of 10. Moments later, perhaps overcome with emotion, Ali sat down in the ring for several moments as his idolators swarmed onto the canvas to surround him. Zairois police and paratroopers needed several minutes to clear the confusion. Not long after that the dawn broke here. But soon a heavy rainstorm crashed over the sta-dium. But it was raining on an old and new heavyweight cham-

Judge Says Count Went Too Quickly

KINSHASA, Zaire, Oct. 30 (UPI) —One of the two judges of the Georgs Foreman-Muhammad Ali fight said today he thought American referee Zack Clayton had been a little too fast in counting Foreman out.

"I do not want to criticize n colleague in a difficult job," said judge Nouriddine Adalla of Tunisia. "but I think the count did go a little too fast. I think he may have picked up the count about two seconds off."

Clayton and the other judge, American James Taylor, left here less than five hours after the fight and were not available for The judge's and referee's score cards were not announced. Adalla said he had Ali three points ahead when the knockout came in the eighth round.

"I had four rounds even and three for All." Adalla said. "The other two also had Ali three points ahead but one of I forget which, had Poreman winning one round and Ali winning four. He was the-only one who gave Foreman a round,

Dick Sadler, Foreman's ma er, said he was perfectly satisfied about the way the match was refereed and had no complaints about the count.

In the moment of his greatest triumph he made it seem as though he was communicating only to the closed-circuit teleeast audience at Constitution Hall here last night. .

Champ Alters Plan And Doesn't Dance

By John Vinocur

KINSHASA, Zaire, Oct. 30 (AP). - The winner fumed and complained, and looked as angry as a vindicated man can when he's proved - with a vengeful band-that he's been right all The loser talked gently, mildly, reasonably.

The roles were o'd and wouldn't have been reversed bad the fight ended differently.

Muhammad Ali, champion: again, couldn't find anything nice to say about George Foreman. And Foreman couldn't dig up anything mean to say against Ali. No skill, scared, doesn't like to get hit, a phony champ who punches like a sissy a bully who was built up by know-nothing writers—Ali had those words to describe Foreman. And these: "He was scared; he was humiliated. I did it. I said I'd do it, but did you listen? I said I'd stick him and that he didn't like to ge hit and that I'm the greatest heavyweight of all time, but did you listen? "I didn't dance. I wanted to make him lose his power. Be punched like a sissy. I stayed on the ropes. Staying on the ropes is a beautiful thing for a fighter. You think when I'm on the ropes I'm uoing bad," Ali, who surprised Foreman by not dencing, said it was his idea not to box on his toes. He said that he thought he discouraged Foreman during the fight by continuously talking to him, telling him, "Come on, take your best shot. Come on, hit hard. Here'- the body, hit hard. You're an amateur. Show me something. You're the champion.

A. for the knockout, something which All has not done often recently, the new champion said, "The man probably could have got up. He was tired and knew he 'ouldn't ...in."

Ali added: "What you saw wasn't my work. It wasn't me because I don't have a punch. Me knocking out George? That ain't me, that's Allab." All tooked incredibly peeved in victory. He had told everyone how hard he had trained, how he had hit the heavy bag again and how Foreman was a "mummy" But no one wanted to bet on him, seemed, and all the talk was about Foreman's awesome power,

Foreman had nothing angry to say at all, and his voice was calm as he talked with reporters. His sentiments tinkled while Ali's clanged. "Nobody lost," Foreman said, pushing the facts a little. "We have built some real bridges here. When the competition is clean, there is never a loser. If there is a good fight, there's no loser."

Foreman, humbled, with tears in his eyes after his first setback, admitted he didn't follow the "good advice" in his corner. He said his trainer, Dick Sadler, had told him to go for the midsection in the early going, and not to look for a quick knockout, and not to wear himself out. Foreman said he felt in control of the fight until the fifth round, when he suddenly tired.

Foreman even had some incredible praise for the man who ridiculed him. Of Ali, who rolled his eyes weirdly and mouthed a curse after the playing of the Star-Spangled Banner, Foreman said, "He's a true American, a great gentleman and a cham-pion." Then he added, "If you don't have anything good to say about somebody, then you shouldn't my anything at all." Of the punch that took him that he got a pretty good look at, and they were the ones that did most of the damage. After the fight, Foreman, his face bruised, was on the verge out. Foreman said it was the one of tears as be told of his first setback as a fighter. "I am a good American," Forefenc my homeland, but I was glad to come back here to the land of my ancestors and see people who look so much like my mother and father." Sitting in his yellow-colored dressing room, Ali hedged questions about retirement, but he spoke surely when be extolled himself, helitind Foreman and claimed the divinity in his corner.

"He was an amateur. I was the professional," Ali said. "I hope that the boxing world will finally Sadler's analysis of Foreman's irfeat was that the fight turned not on what Ali did, but on what Foreman failed to do.

Ali brought no surprises with him, Sadler maintained, saying that all Ali's talk about dancing him to death was meaningless.

"Muhammad did what he always done. He backed up and lay on the ropes and put his hands up. When he does that he's blinded to the side like a horse with blinkers. But George didn't work the blind angles.

"Now, they always said George was a pusher, a brutal man, but he didn't push at all. He was trained and knew what to do, but it didn't happen." Foreman spent until the middle of the afternoon today in

When he was asked if Foreman didn't seem to be willing to take punches from Ali, Moore said, "I told him he hit hard. People write that he isn't a slugger, but the fact is he does hit." Airline Tickets tickets, possibly worth several million pounds, have been stolen from eight London travel agencies during the past three months, the police said yesterday.

Stolen in London LONDON, Oct. 30 | UPI .-More than 2,500 blank airline

Some of the tickets already have been filled in and used for flights-one from London to Nairobi, and another from London to Los Angeles, a Scotland Yard spokesman said. Airline officials said that they believed the stolen tickets were being sold to cut-rate travel firms in this country which specialize in cheap flights abroad. Scotland Yard said there was no way to put a specific value on the loss. These tickets were blank, so they could be made out for flights to France or around the world," he said, "The value could easily be several million

Ufologist Explains 'Secret of the Ages'

PARIS (IHT) - "Yes, indeed," said the Honorable William Francis Brinsley Le Poer Trench. "People did tend to poke a bit of fun at me. But they don't much anymore. The young people, especially, don't." The diffident British voice, a little indistinct on the trans-Channel phone line, held a note of well-bred satisfaction.

Not, mind you, that they were amused by his name, which is an ancient and honored one. Mr. Le Poer Trench's family name is Cromarty—he is a half-brother of the seventh Earl of Cromarty and is heir to the title, which dates from 1803. The Trenches, a family of French origin, take their name from the seigneurie of La Tranche, in Poitou, of which they were once lords. The name has a special aptness for the present heir

He is the author of "Secret of the Ages," a book just published in London by Souvenir Press. Mr. Le Poer Trench is "a ufologist"—prehaps the ufologist. You don't meet them every day. He explained, in the course of a lengthy telephone interview, that the word is a comage from UFO—which of course means unidentified flying object. Mr. Le Poer Trench, having spent most of the last 25 years on the UFO trail, might even, if he chose, simply call himself a "fologist." He's pretty well eliminated the "U" from UFO.

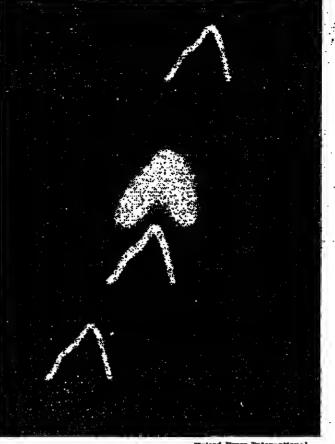

The author of six previous books on the same subject, he feels that this time he has really got their number. He knows what they are, he said confidently, and he knows where they come from; the real revelation is contained in the second part. The "Secret of the Ages," according to Mr. Le Poer Trench, is that UFOs or flying saucers are space ships, all right, but not from outer space; from inside the earth. CMr. Le Poer Trench should not be confused with a fellow Briton, J. R. R. Tolkien, proprietor of the "Middle Earth" and father of the Hobbits.)

Warming to his subject, he began a quiet but heartfelt explanation of his latest UFO theories. (He said, in answer to a question, that he has had no scientific training but is merely an enthusiastic layman, who writes in layman's language about a subject that has intrigued millions of people for at least a

"You see, you've got to understand, first of all," he said, "that the earth is hollow." He had believed for most of his life, he said, that the earth's core was a molten mass of gaseous lava-like material. But a scientific friend set him straight and having organized a worldwide UFO-watching corps and an international UFO bi-monthly journal, he began writing his books, finally evolving the theories set forth in "Secret of the

The earth's interior, according to Mr. Le Poer Trench, is crisscrossed with a complex network of tunnels. "They were built by the people of Atlantis." The line was clear, the cool and measured British voice matter-of-fact. What happened, you see, was this: The legendary island of the "Western sea," described, among others, by Plato, in two of his dialogues, was indeed destroyed—"around 9500 BC"—but its inhabitants had, as a precaution, built a safety hatch—the tunnel system—"to protect themselves from seismic disturbances and extraterrestrials." When permanent destruction of Atlantis was imminent, they retreated to the tunnels.

The tunnel system, he went on, has two entrances and "is 1,500 miles in circumference." You can see these entrances, he said, "In satellite photographs." These—some of which illustrate his new book-were obtained not from NASA but "another official American agency." The space ships of the Atlantians, when they leave middleearth to go aloft, are indeed "watching us," as lots of people have suspected, Mr. Le Poer Trench said. Why? Well, to see that we don't do anything that would endanger their civilizawhich, after all, they've managed to preserve for almost 10,000 years inside the earth, not counting the period before Atlantis was mundated. Had he himself ever seen a UFO? "Only once," Mr. Le Poer Trench said. It was during a vacation in the French provinces and he called it to the attention of two American boys who were there. "It winked its lights at us" and went away.

Having finally solved the UFO commdrum to his own satisfaction, Mr. Le Poer Trench is far from happy about them, though his disposition seems in general to be one of buoyancy. He is convinced that they convey a warning to our world. an odd thing," he said. "Whenever there's a UFO sighting, anywhere in the world, there are always strange men on the scene before anyone else has heard about it. Foreign-looking men. Taking pictures, things like that ... And then, of course, there are the Men in Black." The men ...?

"They turn up all over the world, too. Anywhere that people have been poking too deeply into the UFO question." The Men in Black, he said, call on you and leave the clear impression that the smart thing would be to bugger off. Mr. Le Poer Trench began writing his books in the early 1960s, and they have sold briskly since the start. Recently, at 63, he married for the third time. He and his bride occupy adjoining apartments in the Mayfair district of London. Not long ago he quit his job to devote all of his time to writing about UPOs, and a new book is in the works. He used to write for a gardening magazine. He always, you might say, had an ear to the ground.

The Price of a Divorce $2.261 Million in Alin

Broadcasting executive George Storer, 74, of Miami, says that he will appeal a $2.261-million alimony order, one of the largest divorce settlements of its kind. Dorothy Storer, 73, who was his third wife, said the will not settle for less no matter how long the case drags on. Dade County Circuit Court Judge Alan Schwertz ordered Storer to give his former wife $19,000 a month for 119 months, pay her attorney $200,000 and court costs of $10,963. He also gave Mrs. Storer possession of the couple's $750,000 home. The "style of living to which these parties accustomed themselves boggles the mind," said Judge Schwartz. Storer's attorneys pegged his net worth at $31.6 million.
